The Irony of the “Cold Open”

What is it? A “cold open” is a TV term for a scene that plays immediately before the opening title credits.

The 17-Second Joke: In this episode’s cold open, the gang arrives to find their sacred coffee shop couch occupied by complete strangers (who were actually the show’s real-life writers!).

The Takeaway: Sometimes, the best humor in English doesn’t require any words at all—just a slow turn and a walk back out the door.
